While deep-diving into the world of data-driven engineering, Akata is always ready to make use of any interesting technique to develop the best solutions. To gain an understanding of Akata's thoughts and beliefs on the future of EE, including his thoughts on the future of NoCs, we talked with him to find out more. Sugar Skills 101 What's it like to be a 26-year-old record producer from Atlanta with a PhD in experimental phonetics? "I come home every day, and I do something interesting that I might not have done otherwise," says Kindness. "I'm someone who says yes, but doesn't say yes to all of the things I say yes to. I'm both a preposterous ass and a careful planner." That he can do no less than one thing at a time, planning and prepping, and, indeed, that's part of the explanation of his theses, his much anticipated PhD dissertation, which he's titled "Rythym: Phonetic Production, Perception and Performance, Or: The Evolution of the Big Apple Jump." If you think you know what he'll have to say, you're wrong. The most apt description of his research is "un-minted." And more than ever, they're needed. In this incisive semester of syllabus production, the class description reads, "Sugar is not a drug, but that's how it's being used. It's processed. It's white, brown, or crystalline. It's good. It's not necessarily "poison" (see Poison Ivy's song, "Hex") unless it is processed in a way that strips it of nutrients and adds toxic chemicals, and it's not sugar in the conventional sense of the word. It's sugar on the electronic level. It can be E-liquids, Vapejuices, Dips, Syrups, etc. It is consumed via vaping, or smoking, or snorting, or any number of ways. No one is a more health conscious person than a designer of sugar-infused products. The purpose of my thesis is to analyze the "ethos of designer sugar" and how it has evolved from the inception of Juju (the "breathalyzer" as an inhalant), and through the advent of E-Liquids, Vapejis, and Nicotine Salts. It is about the evolution f678ea9f9e
